Kilrenny Parish Including Cellardyke

This Parish, containing the inland village of Kilrenny and the fishing village of Cellardyke, is on the south-east border of the County. It is bounded by the Firth of Forth on the south, by the parish of Grail on the east, by Crail and Carnbee on the north, and by the two Anstruthers and Carnbee on the west. Its length eastward is nearly three and a half miles, and its breadth upwards of two miles.

The surface rises from the shore in a gentle acclivity, unbroken by any eminence of importance, and presents to the eye a highly cultivated appearance. Almost the whole land is in a state of cultivation, the exceptions being, a few acres along the shore, which are constantly in pasture, about a dozen acres of common, belonging to the feuars of the Burgh of Kilrenny, and a small portion under wood. Like most of the land in the East Neuk, it is generally highly fertile, and carries luxuriant crops. The rocks chiefly belong to the coal formation, though that mineral is not wrought in the Parish. The roads from Anstruther to Crail, and from Anstruther to St Andrews, besides cross roads, intersect the Parish.

Kilrenny is said to derive its name from the ancient Church, which was dedicated to St Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, whose fame for piety was, in early times, great throughout Christendom. The name, Irenæus, is supposed to have been corrupted first to Irnie, and finally to Renny, which has long been in common acceptance. The Burgh of Kilrenny consists of the two villages of Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardyke, which is on the sea coast, and upper Kilrenny, which is situated about half a mile inland. The latter contains the Parish Church and Manse, the Parish School and School-House, two farm houses with farm steadings, and about a dozen workmen's cottages. It is not, properly speaking, a Royal Burgh, for so far as is known, it never had a Royal Charter, and it holds feu of a subject superior, Admiral Bethune, of Balfour. It seems, however, to have exercised the privilege of sending a member to the Scottish Parliament without any objections; and at the Union it was classed with the two Anstruthers, Crail, and Pittenweem, in sending a member to the British Parliament; and by the Reform Bill it was, for the same purpose, conjoined with these burghs, along with Cupar and St Andrews. The magistrates had the ordinary jurisdiction of magistrates of Royal Burghs, until, in consequence of an error in a previous election, it was disfranchised in 1828; since which period, all municipal matters have been under the charge of managers appointed by the Court of Session.

Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardyke, consists of one main street running along the shore, eastward from the boundary with Anstruther Easter. It is separated from that parish by a small burn, and apparently forms, along with Anstruther Easter and Wester, only one rather long town. It is one of the most important fishing stations in the County. Its fishermen, who comprise the bulk of the adult male population, are hardy and industrious, and immense quantities of cod, ling, haddock, and herring, are caught by them, during the season. For fishing statistics, harbour accommodation &c. see introduction to Anstruther Easter.

The only place of worship, in connection with the Parish, is the Parish Church, which is at Kilrenny; but the Anstruther Free and IT. P. Churches, with their ministers' Manses, and the Free Church Male and Female Schools, and teachers' dwelling-houses, are in this Parish, though within the Parliamentary bounds of the Burgh of Anstruther. In addition to the Parish School, there is a Female Industrial School, and an Adventure School in Cellardyke, and a Female Industrial School at Spalefield, on the western boundary, under the patronage of Lady Douglas, of Grangemuir.

The Postal arrangements are the same as Anstruther (which see), with this exception, that there is a receiving Office at Cellardyke, which closes at 1 p.m. and 8 p.m., and a Sub-Office at Kilrenny, at which letters are received at 10.30 A.M., and despatched at 1.30 p.m.

PARISH OF ANSTRUTHER EASTER.

The Parish of Anstruther Easter is situated in the south-eastern part of the County, and comprises merely the sea-port town of Anstruther Easter, having no landward district attached to it. It is bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the west by Anstruther Wester, from which it is separated by the Dreel Burn, on the north by the landward part of the parish of Kilrenny, and on the east by the fishing town of Cellardyke, also part of Kilrenny parish. The shore is rugged and rocky, and a small bay, with a safe and commodious harbour, washes the town.

Previous to 1634, Anstruther Easter formed part of the parish of Kilrenny, but in that year it was formed into a separate parish, and got a Church of its own.

The Manse is a curious building, built in 1590, by James Melville, nephew of the celebrated Andrew Melville, then minister of Kilrenny. The Parish Church, built in 1634, has a Spire, and was repaired in 1834, and contains upwards of 600 sittings. There is also a Free Church, a United Presbyterian Church, an Independent, and a Baptist Chapel.

The town of Anstruther Easter stands immediately between the towns of Anstruther Wester and Cellardyke, and the three appear as one narrow town, stretching along the shore. It was erected into a Royal Burgh by James VI., in 1583, and is governed under the recent Burgh Reform Act, by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and five councillors, and unites with St Andrews, Cupar, Crail, Kilrenny, Anstruther Wester, and Pittenweem, in returning one member to Parliament.

From its contiguity to Cellardyke, Anstruther is one of the best fishing stations in Scotland, and fish-curing is the staple trade of the district, upwards of 50,000 barrels of herrings being caught in 1860, all of which were either cured on the spot, or despatched by cart, rail, and steam-boat, to inland towns. A large quantity of cod, ling, haddock, &c. , are also brought into the harbour during the season, and are either salted or despatched in a fresh state to inland districts. The number of fishing boats are not only twice the size, but they are trebled in number during the last thirty years; and the want of harbour accommodation, especially during the herring fishing, has been severely felt for a series of years. To remedy that evil, the burghs of Anstruther and Cellardyke have united their efforts to obtain, with Government assistance, a Union Harbour, at a cost estimated at about £35,000, and which, with the present harbour, will give a space of 13[^] acres, and will accommodate 500 fishing boats, and admit vessels of 500 tons at half-flood: there will be seven feet of water at the east quay, at the lowest spring tide. The trade, in addition to fish-curing, is chiefly of a domestic nature, but there is a considerable portion of business done in the export of grain, potatoes, &c.

Several coasters belong to the port, and a steam-boat plies three times a week to Leith, conveying grain, fish, &c., and returning with merchants' goods. The nearest railway station is at Kilconquhar, between which and Anstruther coaches run four times a day, and measures are in progress to extend the East of Fife Line, on to the union harbour at Anstruther. A weekly com market is held on Saturday, but the annual fairs are now of no importance. Anstruther Easter is the birth place of Dr. Chalmers, of European fame, and of Professor Tennant, the bard of Anster Fair, and other pieces of great poetic merit.

PARISH OF ANSTRUTHER WESTER.

Anstruther Wester is a small Parish on the south-east coast, and contains a Royal Burgh of the same name. It has a very irregular form, and contains about 600 acres of arable land, and about 9 or 10 acres of common, on which the burgesses have the privilege of pasture and casting turf. It is bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth, along which it extends for about half a mile, on the east by Anstruther Easter, from which burgh it is separated by the Dreel Bum, on the north by Carnbee and Kilrenny, and on the west by Pittenweem. The Parish Church appears, from the remains of a large choir, and the Gothic structure of the Steeple, to be a very ancient building, but it has often been repaired. There is no Dissenting Chapel or Subscription School in the Parish.

The town of Anstruther Wester was erected into a Royal Burgh by James VI. , in 1587, and managed their affairs by a Town Council, three bailies, and a treasurer ;" but in 1852, in consequence of some illegal proceedings at an election of council, the Court of Session declared the Burgh disfranchised, and appointed three managers to conduct the affairs of the Burgh. The inhabitants of the landward part of the Parish are chiefly engaged in agriculture. The town is perhaps the smallest Royal Burgh in Scotland, and being only separated by a small burn from Anstruther Easter, and in reality forming, with that burgh, only one town, the employments of the population are similar to those of Anstruther Easter.
